

Video on post-90s generation

Think about the impression we, the post-90s generation, give to others. Some people have made negative comments about us. Are they true?

I am one of the ThinkSeries Leaders of 2010. My group, comprising 19 members, wants to make a difference.

We filmed a documentary entitled Impression of the Post-90s. Our mission was to find out what the public really thought about the younger generation.

We collected first-hand information by interviewing pedestrians and students. Now, we have submitted our documentary to the ThinkSeries Video Competition.

In addition, we have set up two webpages to help internet users post their views about the city's teenagers. We received more than 1,500 individual responses in less than a month.

I have learned a lot by participating in this activity. It helped hone my interview, analytical and problem-solving skills.

The ThinkSeries awards ceremony will be held tomorrow, where the results will be announced.

If you want to watch our video, visit www.thinkseries.org/voice.

Stephanie Smith, The Hong Kong University Graduates Association College