

Best Commentary Award Champion

Students name: Joyce Yip (S.6), Delphica Chan (S.6)

School: School

Entry No: 163

Theme:  Love

Division:  S.1 – 3  S.4 – 7

Title: Love of Country

Max.8 words

Picture:

(less than 2MB size)

Inspired and Supported by:

Caption: A little girl from Beijing, supporting China. 2008/8/8

Max.30 words

Commentary: I am a Chinese. I am a first grader. I love red. I love playing with my toys, blowing bubbles, and singing. I also love dancing with my little national flag the most, because I'm proud to be Chinese.

S.1 – 3:

100 – 200 words

S.4 – 7:

200 – 300 words

We took this picture in Beijing, where lots of commercials and modernised buildings can be found. As we were walking, there came this little girl. A girl in red dress with red hair band, holding a red national flag. She was dancing in her own unique style and the way she motioned her flag was with pure joy. Her angelic smile captured our souls. What's so special about this flag she was holding? It was no ordinary flag, it was her precious one. She saw no Olympics, no Tibet, no treaties in the flag. She did not let any politics or comments from the outside world affect her love of country. She saw only one thing --- China, her motherland. We could feel her happiness just standing next to her because her enthusiasm was simply powerful, it was shining through her eyes. Would our country be the way it is now if each of us loved our nation with a heart of gold? Would there be more to just money or politics in the millions of the national flags? One thing for sure, there would be more love to be seen, to be felt, to be given. The little girl reminded us that what we are adds up to what our country is. Something as simple as a burning heart can make a big difference. Because what we need is a pure love for the country, our heritage, our culture, and our fellow countrymen.

Inspired and Supported by:

